

DROPPING OUT TO RISE UP – Maria Fernanda Ramirez Covarrubias

Dropping out of school or even from college it's a very risky decision in the eyes of every person that wants to have a piece of stability in their lives, have a stable job by getting a degree but after of all not getting what they really wanted because they didn't take the risk to do it and become successful, therefore there is a thing that Bill Gates, Steve Jobs, and Mark Zuckerberg have in common, they had the courage to follow and chase their idea and dreams, but by this, they gained contacts, they started earning money and the most important thing, they had the ability to control this idea and the resources to make it real, the knowledge about how to control the money they earned by the time they has success, the irony of all of this is that everyone argue that school and our studies are important for all in our live, we "survive" and get a job by this, but why not follow our dreams? Is really that difficult to have success following our dreams?

I have an artist that is my inspiration in this way, his name is duki (Mauro Ezekiel Lombardo), he is an artist from the Argentine scene, he didn't born with knowledge to start a business and he didn't have any idea about one, but he was born with the ability of improvise rhymes, he leaved school at a young age (he leaved it all on high school), he started to search for a job because his mom believed that it was the best for him, but he started following his dreams while this, she got into a rap competition called "El Quinto Escalon", in the day of the competition he had a very important interview of a job and he was winning and winning a lot of battles, he had to take the decision about a stable job or a dream, he won that competition being the champion of the fifth edition of this event, and by this he also won an opportunity to make a song in a professional music studio, by this releasing his first song and became an absolute star in this country.

Maybe for most of the people leaving it all for a dream can ruin your life, because sometimes you don't get what are you tying to follow or don't have the knowledge of how to do it, or you can even be blessed by the "lucky factor", but sometimes if the idea is that good that you think it is what you want to do don't give up, search the way to success by this and make it the better way possible and make the effort you put in that make it worth it, even start learning how to make it all possible, you are responsible about your own success and your own life.

Yeah you can face a lot of things by dropping school blindfolded just to follow a dream, not all is like this, you need to have re resources to start again but with stability and even knowledge to follow your dreams and ideas, and example is, I have a project that I want to start, but I don't have money to start it, or even I don't have the materials, the contacts or even the idea about how start it, its start earning everything and by the time of this start with your project, learn about what I need to know to start it or even study the market or the ambient that this project goes to, how to make it shine a lot than other products and make it something interesting for the people it is aimed at, we should interpret this success stories to have inspiration for our dreams and search about how to make them true, they found something that society needed and made it a reality, technology advances that society needed but didn't know or social skills by the way the internet was getting popularity and was being more and more big by all over the world.

You need to start following your dreams by the way that you are looking for success, stability and happiness for you, you are capable of everything, to know things that you need for this or even to get near to the people you need to this, you build your own succes.
